Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Umpire s Manual and Rules of Lawn Tennis With Cases and Decisions System and organization properly applied will give a better result with less effort. A tournament must be treated as a business proposition and managed as such to be successful from all points of view - gallery, players and officials. The following plan can be so modified as to be advantageous and effective in producing a successful result and give satisfaction to all concerned. The four important features of the management of a tournament may be subdivided as follows: 1. General management of the tournament by the committee. 2. Players. 3. Umpires and officials. 4. Gallery. The first step in the handling of the tournament is the organization of the general committee, which establishes the general policy, prices to be charged and all matters on which you have to get an agreement by the committee-at-large. It then becomes the part of the chairman to organize his subcommittees and to distribute the work. Next you should be sure that your finances and tickets are going...
