Pain: The Science and Culture of Why We Hurt

By Jackson, Marni.

Bloomsbury. 1 Paperback(s), 2002. soft. Book Condition: New. Why is pain so poorly understood? Why do we still distinguish between mental pain and physical pain, when pain is always an emotional experience? And if pain is the reason why most people visit the doctor, why are most doctors so bad at addressing suffering? Published in the United States as Pain: The Fifth Vital Sign, this book from the author of Home Free, and The Mother Zone, Don't I Know You? is a witty, personal, surprisingly insightful inquiry. Marni Jackson takes us from the history of pain with stories of its many medical, literary, and philosophical explorers to a possible future understanding of pain genetics. "One might think there was nothing new to say about pain, but [this book] is a work of real originality and freshness, full of insights which seem both startling and obvious." Oliver Sacks "Jackson is an ideal guide for this exploration. With her personal and personable perspective, she acts as a surrogate for the reader, simplifying complex issues (both philosophical and technical) and humanizing often abstract concepts. Jackson leavens this very serious subject matter with a wicked and subversive sense of humor." Quill and Quire 366.
